The annual event was scheduled for July 22-23 in downtown Chicago, a short drive from the conference’s headquarters in Rosemont, Ill.

The Big Ten has not yet announced if it will move media days to a virtual format, which would follow the lead of other Football Bowl Subdivision conferences including the American Athletic Conference, Big XII, Conference USA, Mid-American Conference, Mountain West and Sun Belt. The conference instead noted it will “continue to consult with medical experts to determine the appropriate dates and format for our annual event.”
