We mark the occasion by taking a look back at the May 14, 1994, edition of Buckeye Sports Bulletin, which announced his hiring.

"He is considered by many people to be the finest athletic director in the country," said then-Ohio State president Gordon Gee. "Some of you have had an opportunity to talk with people at other places Andy has been ... in each of those occasions, several words have come through: energy, ability, the fact that he is very intelligent, the fact that he makes good choices, the fact that he hires good people, and, of course, ultimately that he cares about the athlete. Those are the issues that we think are important for Ohio State and that are certainly the essence of this university."
