

Donovan Jackson And Cody Simon Available For Western Michigan

Both left guard Donovan Jackson and linebacker Cody Simon will be available to play in tonight's game against Western Michigan, confirmed by an Ohio State spokesperson.

Jackson and Simon were out in Ohio State's season opening win against Akron, and since then have been described by Ryan Day as day-to-day, but they have been practicing all week and could make their 2024 season debuts against the Broncos.

The full availability report has not yet been released, and it's unclear whether either will actually get into the game, but the two seniors' status for the 7:30 p.m. kickoff has been revealed.

While they were out, Austin Sieraveld took over at left guard for the Buckeyes while Sonny Styles moved to the middle linebacker position, with C.J. Hicks earning the start as the Will.