Thomas, who caught an NFL record 149 regular-season passes for a league-high 1,725 yards and nine touchdowns last season, is one of five players in the game at 99 overall, joining Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Patrick Mahomes, Carolina Panthers running back Christian McCaffrey, Los Angeles Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald and New England Patriots cornerback Stephon Gilmore.

He is the only former Ohio State player to ever to earn a 99 overall rating, dating back to the game's first rating system in Madden 99. It's worth nothing former running back Eddie George did grace the cover of Madden 2001, though.

Dallas Cowboys running back Ezekiel Elliott (92 overall), Los Angeles Chargers defensive end Joey Bosa (91 overall) and Pittsburgh Steelers defensive end Cameron Heyward (90 overall) round out the list of former Buckeyes with a 90 or better overall rating.

Washington Redskins defensive end Chase Young, the No. 2 overall pick in this year's NFL Draft, is the highest-rated rookie in the game at 80 overall. Detroit Lions cornerback Jeff Okudah (76 overall) and Baltimore Ravens running back J.K. Dobbins are the highest-rated rookies at their respective positions, meanwhile.

Right tackle Branden Bowen (54 overall) is included in the game after signing an undrafted free agent deal with the Carolina Panthers, but Las Vegas Raiders long snapper Liam McCullough, New England Patriots tight end Rashod Berry and New York Giants wide receivers Austin Mack and Binjimen Victor are not.

Los Angeles Rams long snapper Jake McQuaide, who is listed as a tight end since the game does not have long snapper designation, is the lowest-rated former Buckeye at 35 overall.
