The Buckeyes, who were ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll, fell out of the Top 25 last week thanks to the Big Ten's initial decision to postpone fall sports. But now that the conference announced it will resume the season on Oct. 24, Ohio State is back at No. 10.

Though they received two first-place votes, the Buckeyes now trail eight teams who were behind them in the preseason poll, including five SEC programs who haven't played a game this fall. Ohio State does lead all Big Ten teams, however, with Penn State (No. 13), Wisconsin (17), Michigan (19) and Minnesota also in the Top 25.

The Buckeyes were not ranked in Sunday's AP Poll, which will once again include teams from the Big Ten following next week's slate of games.
