

Olympic Update: Armstrong Wins Gold, Clemons And Yoder Finish Their Games

Hunter Armstrong helped the U.S. men's medley relay team to the Olympic finals — now he's a gold medalist.

The United States' 4x100m men's medley relay team finished first in its race Saturday evening. The four swimmers combined for a 3:26.78 swim to set an Olympic and world record in the event.

"We could not be more proud of the United States and Hunter Armstrong," Ohio State director of swimming and diving Bill Dorenkott said. "This is the stuff of dreams. And to think Hunter Armstrong from Dover, Ohio, is making his dreams come true on the world stage is pretty amazing."

Armstrong helped the Americans earn a spot in the final, swimming in the team's preliminary race. He swam backstroke, completing the race in 53.51 and helping his team to a seventh-place finish. He will receive a medal for his efforts as part of the relay team.

Armstrong is the first Ohio State male swimmer to make the United States Olympic team since four Buckeyes competed in the 1956 Summer Games in Melbourne, Australia.

"Tomorrow morning, there will be a young man waking up somewhere in Ohio dreaming of being the next Hunter Armstrong, and that is pretty special," Dorenkott said. "The best part is that Hunter and Ohio State are just getting started. Look out, Paris, because the Buckeyes are coming in strong."
