Approximately 130 coaches, scouts and front office personnel from all 32 NFL franchises were in attendance for Ohio State's 2019 Pro Day on Wednesday afternoon.

That includes general managers Brandon Beane (Buffalo Bills), Chris Grier (Miami Dolphins), Rick Spielman (Minnesota Vikings), Mike Mayock (Oakland Raiders) and John Lynch (San Francisco 49ers), as well as head coaches Zac Taylor (Cincinnati Bengals), Pat Shurmur (New York Giants), Mike Zimmer (Minnesota Vikings) and Jay Gruden (Washington Redskins).

They watched as quarterback Dwayne Haskins; running back Mike Weber; wide receivers Parris Campbell, Johnnie Dixon and Terry McLaurin; offensive linemen Michael Jordan, Demetrius Knox, Malcolm Pridgeon and Isaiah Prince; defensive tackle Dre'Mont Jones; linebacker Dante Booker; and kicker Sean Nuernberger ran through individual position drills. Defensive end Nick Bosa and cornerback Kendall Sheffield did not participate, as the former will rest on his combine effort as a likely top-5 pick, while the latter suffered a torn pectoral muscle during workouts in Indianapolis last month.

The 2019 NFL Draft will be held April 25-27 in Nashville, home of the Tennessee Titans.
